

“I can feel my feet again... It’s unbelievable.”

-What One 86-Year-Old Man Discovered That Changed Everything

If You’re Struggling with Neuropathy Pain...

Are you tired of:

- Waking up to burning, tingling feet every morning?
- Being afraid to walk without holding onto furniture?
- Missing out on activities you once loved?
- Taking pills that don’t seem to help anymore?
- Feeling like this is just “part of getting older”?

What if I told you it doesn’t have to be this way?

My name is Richard, and at 86, I was told by my medical doctor there is nothing he could do for my neuropathy...

A year ago, I would wake up in the middle of the night with burning feet. Walking around my home, I used to hold onto furniture to keep my balance.

Fast forward to today... I am sleeping through the night, walking better -- I even rejoined the weekly men’s golf league in town.

Dr. Randy has given me my life back.

The Solution That’s Helping Thousands Reclaim Their Mobility & Independance

At Accelerated Chiropractic & Natural Healing Center in Morris, there’s a Neuropathy Reversal Program that’s giving people like us our independence back – without drugs, surgery, or painful injections.

- Playing with your grandchildren again
- Feeling steady on your feet when cooking or gardening
- Having the energy to do the things YOU want to do

This isn’t wishful thinking – it’s what our patients experience every day.

REAL PATIENTS REAL RESULTS

“Eight months into the program, I’ve experienced tremendous improvement. Surprisingly to even myself, I experienced heal-to-toe walking improvements in the first 30 days. I’m walking 2-3 miles no problem at all with my feet.”

– Terry from Morris

“More steadier, better balance, I can guarantee you that, I am enjoying life a lot more.”

– Don from Osakis

“It works and well worth the money”

– Delores from Bertha

Funding available to restore wetlands around Minnesota

The Minnesota Board of Water and Soil Resources (BWSR) is now accepting applications for conservation easements, partnership and third-party projects that will pave the way for wetland restoration projects via the agency’s Local Government Road Wetland Replacement Program (LGRWRP).

Approximately $5 million is available for projects during this application period. For the conservation easement option, landowners in select Wetland Bank Service Areas (BSAs) who have restorable wetlands on their property can apply to receive a per-acre payment rate to enroll land into permanent conservation easements through the LGRWRP.

The Lprogram offers easement payment rates that are generally higher than are available through state and federal conservation programs.

A partnership project is where BWSR and a partner, such as a landowner or local government unit, enter a contract to design and construct a wetland mitigation bank together. Third-party projects are agreements in which a bank sponsor establishes a wetland mitigation bank and sells credits to BWSR.

State and federal laws require replacement of wetlands that are filled or drained. Through the LGRWRP, restored wetlands can produce credits that are deposited into a statewide wetland bank. These credits are provided to local road authorities to support repair and rehabilitation projects to meet state and federal wetland mitigation requirements. Program details are handled by BWSR, which provides payment directly to the landowners for the right to restore the wetlands.

“This program is a win-win for wetland protection and essential for getting road improvement projects completed,” BWSR Executive Director John Jaschke said. “It takes the burden of wetland mitigation off local road authorities, while also providing flexible options for participating landowners. Landowners, local road authorities, and our water resources all benefit.”

Landowners can work with their local soil and water conservation district staff to prepare applications. The application period opened today and closes Nov. 13. For more, see the following website: <https://bwsr.state.mn.us/>

U.S. soybean farmers concerned over lack of sales to China this year

By Heather Close
The Rural Blog

U.S. farmers haven’t sold beans to China, and soybean growers are sounding the alarm.

“American soybean farmers are in panic mode as they harvest what is expected to be a bumper crop,” reports Patrick Thomas of The Wall Street Journal. “China accounted for more than half of the $24.5 billion of American soybean exports last year.”

By snubbing American soybeans and purchasing South American-grown beans instead, China is once again using U.S. farmer strife as a way to punish the Trump administration’s trade wars. Thomas adds, “From January through August of this year, Chinese buyers purchased just over 200 million bushels of U.S. soybeans, compared with almost 1 billion bushels over the same period last year.”

Even before China opted not to purchase U.S. soybeans, American farmers were already struggling with high costs for equipment, labor and fertilizer.

“Congress in December passed a $10 billion bailout for farmers,” Thomas wrote. “President Trump said last week that he was ‘going to do some farm stuff this week’ to help growers cope with the loss of exports to China.”

Meanwhile, some soybean growers are choosing to store their harvested crops for now. Iowa soybean grower Morey Hill told Thomas, “There’s no incentive to sell right now.” Hill predicted that without sales to China, the soybean market could likely turn into a “blood bath.”

Instead of waiting on China, Hill has been traveling to countries such as Cambodia and Morocco, working to educate farmers on the benefits of using U.S. soybeans in their fish and animal feed, which is what China does with the majority of its soybeans.

The European Union, Mexico, Vietnam, Egypt and Bangladesh also purchase U.S. soybeans, but those sales, even when combined, aren’t enough.

Farm-to-school programs in state: 114 schools, 461 farms

By University of Minnesota Extension Service

The state of Minnesota has supported schools sourcing Minnesota-raised foods through a farm-to-school food procurement grant since 2019.

The Minnesota Department of Agriculture has offered two types of farm-to-school grants: “First Bite” and “Full Tray” awards.

First Bite grants offered $2,500 to $10,000 to school districts with little to no experience with local procurement, whereas Full Tray grantees could access up to $100,000.

In 2023, federal USDA funds more than tripled the level of funding available to $3.5 million. These additional funds expanded the program’s reach across the state to 114 schools and 501 businesses, including 461 farms and 19 food hubs.

Over 60% of all sales were direct from farm to school, which typically provides a better margin than sales through an intermediary, such as a wholesaler.

New report details the benefits of farm-to-school spending

Extension Educators Ryan Pesch and Brigid Tuck recently collaborated on an evaluation of farm-to-school spending in partnership with IATP, a nonprofit organization that supports farm-to-school initiatives in the state.

The report provides useful data not only to decision-makers but also to farmers who are eyeing schools as potential customers. Highlights include:

For every dollar spent on farm-to-school in Minnesota, an additional $0.94 is generated in economic activity through increased demand with suppliers such as farm input suppliers and increased employee spending.

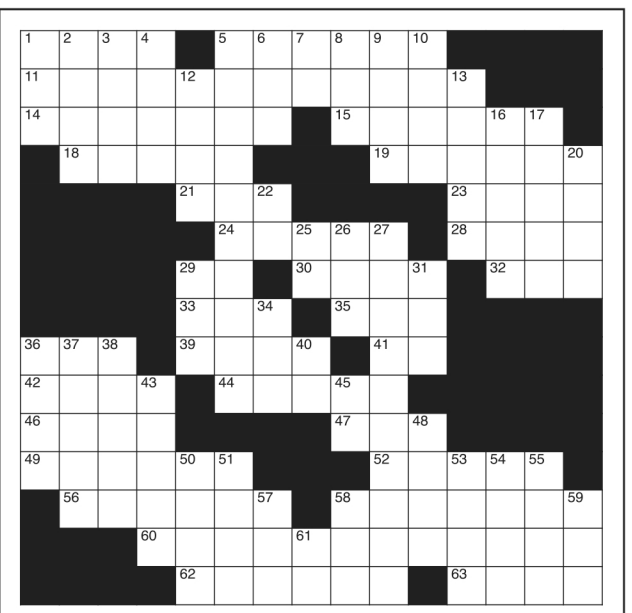

Schools purchased 63% of Minnesota farm products directly from producers, with the remainder from food hubs and traditional wholesalers.

There are two types of grantees, “First Bite” and “Full Tray”. “First Bite” schools are new to farm-to-school.

Ground beef was by far the most commonly sourced farm product. Beef sales accounted for 34% of all sales. Other important products were apples, lettuce, and carrots.

Despite being often associated with specialty crops, farm-to-school sourcing in Minnesota tilted heavily to proteins, which accounted for 48% of all spending by grantees. Vegetables and fruit, in contrast, accounted for 17 % and 23% of all spending, respectively.
